

Looking after your safety

Intelife works hard to keep you safe and make sure your services happen in a safe environment.

Intelife staff carry identification so you can check who is supporting you.

When services are provided in the community or your home we will first check if everything is safe. This is called risk management.

When things go wrong

Intelife must have a good system if things go wrong or someone is hurt.

This is called incident management

Incident Management

Any incident involving you will be responded to, recorded and investigated.

Intelife will always take steps to help if a person might be being harmed or neglected.

Intelife must learn from bad things and make changes so it does not happen again.

Incidents

Even though Intelife tries to keep everyone safe, sometimes accidents and bad things happen.

Intelife staff know what to do if there is an accident or if a bad thing happens.

1. First, they help any hurt people with first aid and may call an ambulance or the police
2. Then if no one is hurt, they will make sure everyone is safe from any danger or hazards
3. Next, they will report the incident by phoning the manager
4. After an incident staff will write a report on Intelife's Incident Management System.

Intelife must manage incidents properly and learn from them. This means all incidents and bad things must be:

- ☒ put on Intelife's Incident Management System
- ☒ investigated to find the cause or reason why they happened
- ☒ fixed so they do not happen again.

What you can do if there is an incident or accident

- Try to be calm, take a big breath
- Do what your support worker asks you to do
- Do what the ambulance officers ask to do
- Do what a police officer asks you to do

If your support worker can't give or get any help, you can take some action:

- You can call an ambulance - 000
- You can call the police - 131 444
- You can ask someone nearby to get help
- You can call someone at Intelife – Head Office 6169 1100

After an incident

If you are involved in an incident Intelife staff will keep you informed and ask for your feedback
They also will:

- report the incident to the NDIS Commission if required
- report the incident to the police or WorkSafe if necessary
- tell you what corrective actions Intelife will take so it does not happen again
